Father's Day Greetings

1943

Dear Dad:

Sunday is your day! It would be fine if we could spend it together. But my duty requires my presence here and your duty requires your presence there, and we must carry on until final and full victory is achieved. I am therefore using this means of sending most cordial greetings and best wishes. How I wish I knew how to express my gratitude for all that you have meant to me and done for me through all the years!

Your devoted son,

Dick
